Composing Arabic With Style:

I. Reduce the occurrence of the sentence pattern “There is…“ in your writing. Arabic prefers to use a margin of 9:1 and has a wide range of verbs that enable this. English doesn’t mind using the equivalent of sentences beginning with “There is…“, are quite common in English. In Arabic, the equivalent sentences (كان هناك … عندم … هناك…) are considered anemic and inexpressive. If you find yourself writing a sentence pattern, stop immediately and reformulate it as a جملة فعلية by using one of the many verbs that you’ve studied over these last few months. You know plenty of verbs, and with a little work, you’ll find a means to express what you’d like to say in a fashion that is truly Arabic and not simply a translation of English.

For example, you’d like to write: “Muhammad Ali was also famous for his controversial political positions.” This is a perfectly viable sentence in English. The direct translation of this sentence into Arabic using the جملة الأسمية is dull and will demonstrate that you are not a native speaker of Arabic:

كان محمد علي مشهوراً لمواقفه السياسية المثيرة للجدل.

You can turn this sentence into real Arabic by replacing «مشهور» and «المثيرة للجدل» with verbal phrases:

اشتهر محمد علي بمواقفه السياسية التي أثارت الجدل (في المجتمع الأمريكي).

This is a small change, but it makes a world of difference.

The fact that you overuse the جملة اسمية is perfectly natural and, until now, was nothing to be ashamed of. The first sentences that you learned in Arabic followed the pattern of اللوّد لطيف. It wasn’t until later that you were introduced to verbs, and in the meantime, you got used to composing Arabic almost exclusively with جملة الاسمية. Now that you have plenty of verbs at your disposal, you’ll need to break habits formed during your first year of Arabic by expanding your repertoire of productive vocabulary and by imitating a native writing style.
II. Please translate the following sentences into Arabic with 1) a جملة اسمية and 2) a جملة فعلية:

There was a florescence (ازدهار) of Islamic thought in Yemen in the 18th century.

American popular culture is different from other popular cultures in terms of its influence.

1)

2)

She is sick because of the food she ate yesterday.

2)

There were many forms of political thought that appeared at that time.

III. Translate the following from English to Arabic, using the grammar as much as possible:

The concept of “al-qadāʾ wal-qadar” is an issue that engaged Muslims in a massive debate throughout the centuries; for this reason, it is impossible to address all aspects of this discussion in this presentation of ours.

“Al-qadāʾ wal-qadar” is a concept that is related to the relationship of this life with the hereafter. If we misunderstand this concept, there would be a great distortion in the relationship between this life and the afterlife in terms of accountability. Therefore it is important to understand the subject in all of its aspects, including its origins in history, the different views regarding it and the correct interpretation of it.
