The government poems on the second page of the 1973 address. It is the same as the previous year's address, which was published in 1973. There is no change in the government's position regarding the economic situation or any specific policies mentioned in the address.
CHAPTER EIGHT

GUEST WORKERS

GUEST WORKERS. They understood that this had become a potentially sociopolitical issue.

The quest for economic stability and a more controlled workforce required the modification of policies and procedures to ensure that foreign workers were not exploited or used as a source of cheap labor. The government took steps to regulate the employment of foreign workers, implementing stricter controls on their entry and exit. These measures were intended to prevent exploitation and ensure that foreign workers were treated fairly and respected as contributors to the economy. The government also aimed to facilitate the integration of foreign workers into the local society, promoting cultural exchange and understanding.
