

The next generation of conservation leadership includes all voices

Join a diverse, committed, and exciting group of freshmen and sophomores from around the country on an 8-week journey from the urban jungle to the old growth forest and back.

- Explore conservation across urban, managed, and protected environments
- Connect conservation to cultural heritage and environmental justice
- Understand conservation in the context of food, water, biodiversity and climate
- Network with conservation professionals
- Become the next generation of conservation leadership

The Year 1 experience, Classrooms in the Field, starts on June 22, 2015. Doris Duke Conservation Scholars will have all travel, food and lodging paid during their 8-week summer experience, and will receive a weekly stipend of $500. Year 1 Scholars may be invited to join a Conservation Solutions Team, or receive a prestigious Conservation Internship in subsequent summers.

Explore why conservation can make a difference and how you can make a difference in conservation.

Learn more and apply at:

Phone: 206-221-8768

Email: ddcsp@uw.edu

www.uwconservationscholars.org

Apply by January 29, 2015

COLLEGE OF THE ENVIRONMENT
UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON